

OXON: 12. Octobris 1644.

His Boord being informed, that in the City of London, the Farthing Tokens are decryed, and by the Rebels there endeavoured to be made not currant, whereby great quantities of them are bought up at small values, and brought up to this City, with intention to vend them here, which will prove very prejudiciall to His Majesty, and this place, if not speedily prevented. It is therefore thought fit and Ordered that in payment of any summe of Mony amounting to 10 shillings or above. No person within this City or Suburbs thereof, pay or receive above the summe of 6 pence in Farthing tokens, and so after that rate. And in payment of any smaller summes, that no person within this City or Suburbs thereof, do pay or receive above the summe of foure Farthings in the payment of twelve pence, and so after that proportion. And if any complaint shall be made against any person for doing contrary hereunto. VVee do hereby declare, that such person shall be proceeded against for his contempt, as a person complying with those who desire to defraud others by making to themselves an unjust gaine.
